In the Amen Corner on CORY-CATURES on By J. Campbell Cory y

HERE are numerous busy corners in New York these days, but I guess it is fairly safe to award the cake to the "Amen Corner" at the Fifth Avenue Hotel as the busiest of them all. Everybody of importance was there-from OTTO ROSALSKY up to B. ODELL, and sideways from ABE GRUBER to M. LINN BRUCE. GRUBER has been quietly expatiating upon his undying affection (in a Pickwickian sense) for one W. TRAVERS JEROME: the way ABE admires the District-Attorney pales the LAWSON-ROGERS bond of good-fellowship to insignificance.

THOMAS GILLERAN has been handing "municipal ownership" souvenirs around promiscuously, and whispered this in my ear ship is accepted generally by all who have studied economic affairs. As a practical matter the operation by private enterprise under short-term leases with strict terms as to method of conduct and revocation for breach of contract might be suggested as preferable. . . There should be no fear by the timid that property rights would be disturbed or, in case of taking over private property for public use, that adequate compensation would not be given." Now what on earth do you make of that?

EDWARD H. HEALEY, the gallant warrior of the Thirtyfifth District, was there-yes, indeed! EDWARD H. HEALEY was there in person. So was SENATOR ELSBERG, his luxuriant tresses carefully divided on the exact centre of his classic browvery busy, too, and useful, no doubt. When you find a man who wears his hair that long and parts it that way, you can rest assured that "the party" looks to him for a whole lot.

WILLIAM HALPIN, prodigious in the importance of his chairmanship of the conference committee, floated about with an air of tolerance and condescension that always makes the truly great

Imagine WILLIAM TRAVERS JEROME drinking high-balls with the ordinary riff-raff of humanity such as newspaper men and him beckon to the waiter "Spaghetti" on several occasions. Some one remarked that he was launching the Jerome boom, but I didne collide with it anywhere. Occasionally a sudden silence of portentous import would hush the festivities, and BENJAMIN ODELIA would side through the crowd. I thought that BENJAMEN had a worried look, but upon inquiry I learned that he always looks that way when an insurance inspector is about and, of course, BILL. LEARY was there.
